Harvest Update

June 24, 2015

ALFALFA

The weather has turned for the better and things are beginning to dry out in New Mexico and Utah allowing the 1st cutting harvest to resume. Due to weather delaying the start of harvest, tonnage is expected to be up while quality remains to be determined.

The Pacific Northwest has also had good weather over the last few weeks giving growers a good harvest window. The 1st cutting Alfalfa harvest is in full swing in Oregon with over half the fields cut and baled. Growers in Washington have begun their 2nd cutting harvest. Due to the nice weather, quality and color are both good.

TIMOTHY

As 1st cutting harvest wraps up, Anderson personnel continue to secure Timothy for the 2015 crop year. The weather has been optimal for the harvest effort. However, the dry and hot weather does have challenges, such as increased brown leaf and bleaching.

STRAW

The Fescue Straw harvest is running approximately 10 days early this year. It has been extremely sporadic with harvest activity kicking off in areas of both the northern and southern regions of the Willamette Valley at about the same time.
